Spelling variants of the surname Guest

This resource is intended for sharing and contains the names, locations, and timestamps of individuals with surname Guest from the 1500s in England, through baptism, marriage, or burial records. Please be aware that the spelling variations and corrupt forms of the modern English surname “Guest” are extensive appearing in these records as well as in earlier 14th-century documents. Despite these variations, the name has consistently pronounced “Guest” or, in some earlier instances, as “ling,” which means “Guest family” in Anglo-Saxon. The Guestling patronymic appears to have become extinct around 1330 in Guestling, Sussex, when an original cadet branch of the "Gest" family ended. Variations in spelling include, but are not limited to: Guest, Ghest, Gheast, Geest, Gest, Geyste, Geste, le Gest, le Gist, de Gest, de Guestling, and de Gestling. While the catalogue seems comprehensive, many records may still be missing. Many filtered because they were considered secondary sources. Overall, bearers of the Guest name, in all its forms, are rare, particularly before the 1550s. From my research experience, the rarity and non-exclusive use the Guest surname—also associated with the hospitality industry and used interchangeably with terms Gest, Geste, and Gesta—complicate the investigation and cloud family heritage contributing to the fading history of the Guest families. Therefore, I have decided share this catalogue in hope that it may provide educational or research value to you.

General historical context

This catalogue includes a majority, but not all, of the 16th-century records featuring the Guest surname across England, compiled by the author to assist others in their genealogical research. It opens with records and a column labelled "Parent BYE," which stands for "Birth Year Estimate," indicating the presumed parent of the baptised child. This data aids in estimating the parent's birth year, even when their name is not explicitly recorded, and, in conjunction with the baptism, enables researchers to concentrate on specific regions and timeframes to further their genealogical studies. Individuals with the Guest surname, in its forms during the 16th century, are relatively uncommon, particularly prior to that time. Records from the 1440s and earlier suggest that those with the Guest patronymic in the 16th century can mainly be traced back to two branches that originated around 1425 in Kings Norton, Worcestershire, now part of Birmingham.

These branches are identified as Guest of Handsworth and Guest of Tewkesbury, with earlier records explored in the author's book, "Guest Paternal Heritage" (2024). The senior Guest branch migrated to the Midlands around 1053, although earlier ties to the region have been noted. They established themselves there, a traceable line in Shropshire through the 1500s and still present today, while later generations of second born and subsequent sons from the 14th century dispersed to form clusters, particularly in Yorkshire, Lancashire, and notably in Kings Norton, Worcestershire, as well as Handsworth, Staffordshire, and nearby Tewkesbury in Gloucestershire/Worcestershire.

The ancestral roots in Kings Norton are believed to trace back to Lega (Hughley), Shropshire, and surrounding regions dating to 1053, including family members before and after the conquest from their original seat in Guestling, Sussex. This area encompasses a tight geographical zone between Guestling (Gestling/Gestlinges) and Rochester and Canterbury in Kent, located to the north/northeast of Guestling, bordered by the from Canterbury/Rochester to Dover and back to Guest, Sussex (Hastings).

It is within this compact region of south east England in Anglo-Saxon times that ancient 1066 pre-conquest Guest family members resided in clusters, as indicated by ongoing research that shows they enjoyed visits and residences from around 945 to approximately 1330. Central to this history is the village of Guestling, Sussex, which is now considered, based on new evidence, to be the likely birthplace of Saeric Gest (c. 1033-1108). This area includes the historic, old, village of Hastings and the old Saxon timber castle predating there before the reconstruction of Hastings following significant shoreline changes affecting the hundreds of Guestling.

Primary records

The people listed were extracted from primary record which are sources considered as first-hand, contemporary account or direct evidence of an event, topic, or time period created by participants or witnesses. These original, uninterpreted materials—such as baptism, marriage, and burial records and can include diaries, photographs, interviews, or official documents—further considered to provide direct, unfiltered information.[1]

Inside – The Guest population of all England for the period 1500s

Baptisms – 311 children
Marriages - 123 marriage records with 122 spouses named.
Burials – 117 captured.

Please note that there may be a few duplicates included. These have been retained for the reader to determine their relevance to their inquiry. While they are considered duplicates, they also serve as records where another scribe may have spelled a person's name differently or recorded a different date, typically just the year or the day after the birth from the related companion record.

[1] A false positive may also happen in paper research, documents, and records when secondary sources are used, leading to conclusions about ancestry based on unreliable information. Without adequate primary documentation, results in a "tree-to-tree" error.
